Dear Harold, April 9, 1996

I received the "Hosty's Pudding" disk last week, and I have gotten it printed out. Thanks. I look forward to reading it when I can get some time. Let me know if you would like me to send a copy along to Bill Neichter.

As I may have mentioned in my last letter, Hanh-Trang turned in her resignation last Friday. In her letter she documented some of the abuses of her new boss, such as mythical complaints the doctors had of her performance. When she checked with the four doctors herself, they all said she was doing fine. To make a long story short, after he read the letter, he asked her if this meant she was calling him a liar. Hanh-Trang said "yes", to which he had no response, and this took place in front of the director of nursing. In the letter, she gave him four weeks notice. But since her boss couldn't take the truth, he had her removed from her office that same day and paid her for the four weeks, plus a couple weeks of vacation she had coming. If he had any concern for the patients, he should have let her work those four weeks and help train any new person they might get. Obviously, his ego is more important.

Best, Gerry

Happy Birthday wishes to you and Lillian.
